Selected International Fund

Annual Review 2018

Investment Results

Selected International Fund's strong performance in 2017 was driven by our holdings in consumer discretionary, industrials and technology sectors.

Selected International Fund delivered strong absolute and relative results in 2017, rising 38.2% compared to a gain of 27.2% for the MSCI ACWI (All-Country World Index) ex U.S., an outperformance of 11%.¹ As of year-end 2017, the Fund outperformed the benchmark over the trailing one-, three-, five-, 10-year and since Davis Advisors began managing the Fund in 1993.

Drivers of outperformance were broad-based. Consumer-related companies in China were strong performers, including Alibaba, JD.com and New Oriental Education and Technology Group.² Among our drivers of recent results in other regions, Naspers of South Africa, Safran of France and InterGlobe Aviation in India were also notable contributors to performance. ■

The average annual total returns for Selected International Fund Class S for periods ending December 31, 2017 are: 1 year, 38.22%; 5 years, 10.61%; and 10 years, 3.24%. The performance presented represents past performance and is not a guarantee of future results. Total return assumes reinvestment of dividends and capital gain distributions. Investment return and principal value will vary so that, when redeemed, an investor's shares may be worth more or less than their original cost. The Fund is subject to a 2% short term redemption fee for shares held for fewer than 30 days. The total annual operating expense ratio for Class S shares as of the most recent prospectus was 1.30%. (The Adviser is contractually committed to waive fees and/or reimburse the Fund's expenses to the extent necessary to cap total annual fund operating expenses of Class S shares at 1.30%. The expense cap expires May 1, 2018. The expense ratio prior to the cap was 1.51%) The total annual operating expense ratio may vary in future years. Returns and expenses for other classes of shares will vary. Current performance may be higher or lower than the performance quoted. For most recent month-end performance, visit selectedfunds.com or call 800-243-1575. The Fund's performance benefited from IPO purchases in 2010 and 2014. After purchase, the IPOs rapidly increased in value. Davis Advisors purchases shares intending to benefit from long-term growth of the underlying company; the rapid appreciation of the IPOs was an unusual occurrence. From the date that Davis Advisors first began managing the Fund (May 1, 1993) until May 1, 2011, Selected International Fund was named Selected Special Shares and invested primarily in domestic equity securities. The Fund invests primarily in foreign equity securities and the past performance of the Fund is unlikely to be relevant to future performance.

This report includes candid statements and observations regarding investment strategies, individual securities, and economic and market conditions; however, there is no guarantee that these statements, opinions or forecasts will prove to be correct. Equity markets are volatile and an investor may lose money. Past performance is not a guarantee of future results 1. Class S shares. Past performance is not a guarantee of future results. Davis Advisors began active daily management of Selected International Fund on June 1, 2001. From May 1, 1993 until May 31, 2001, Davis Advisors had a subadvisor that handled the active daily management of the Fund. Effective May 1, 2011, Selected Special Shares was renamed Selected International Fund. The Fund's investment strategy was modified to invest primarily in a diversified portfolio of common stocks issued by companies outside the U.S., including countries with developed or emerging markets. The Fund was otherwise unchanged. 2. Individual securities are discussed in this piece. While we believe we have a reasonable basis for our appraisals and we have confidence in our opinions, actual results may differ materially from those we anticipate. The return of a security to the Fund will vary based on weighting and timing of purchase. This is not a recommendation to buy, sell or hold any specific security. Past performance is not a guarantee of future results. 3. eMarketer, June 2017.

Perspectives on the Global Investment Landscape and Portfolio Positioning

Investing around the world in select businesses to take advantage of long-term global trends.

While we are bottom-up investors we also look for multiyear trends that provide tailwinds over our long holding period. One such trend driving growth in several of our portfolio companies is the rise of the global online consumer. The global e-commerce market is forecast to grow 18% a year through 2021.³ Just as important more than 80% of e-commerce purchases are made outside the United States so there are ample opportunities to participate in this secular trend in international markets.

In fact, China has clearly passed the United States as the world's largest e-commerce market. To put this in perspective, while U.S. online purchase account for 12% of U.S. retail sales, in China that percentage is 20% and growing rapidly. Because Chinese consumers attained middle class income levels in the era of the internet and the smartphone many leapfrogged the traditional mall and big box retail shopping experience and instead are shopping on their phones. The two giants of Chinese e-commerce, Alibaba and JD.com, together account for more than 80% of business to consumer online sales and have an enormous addressable market as the Chinese population is approaching 1.4 billion people, roughly four times the size of the U.S. population.

Another long-term trend we are taking advantage of is the growth in global travel. Revenue passenger miles have grown at a healthy 6% for many years, driven by global economic growth and the rise of the middle class in emerging markets. In fact, China is projected to become the world's largest air travel market by 2022.⁴ Meanwhile, India was the world's fastest growing aviation market in 2016. The Asia-Pacific region now accounts for 32.9% of air travel and is growing well above the global average at 10.7% per year.⁵

What we do not own is just as important as what we do own and we have avoided a number of widely owned companies known as the "dividend darlings"—so called because their main appeal has been to investors who are seeking dividend yield above all other considerations. In the current environment, investors are naturally starved for yield, which has made them willing to pay high multiples for slow growth businesses often in increasingly challenged industries with little opportunity to significantly increase dividends from here. We expect these dividend darlings to generate subpar investment results especially as interest rates in multiple regions rise over time, making the dividend less attractive. As a result, we own few consumer staples, utilities, telecommunications, and real estate investments. ■

■ Representative Holdings

Safran is a French aerospace equipment manufacturer that produces and services engines, landing gear, brakes, nacelles (the outer casing of an aircraft engine), and other equipment for commercial and military customers. A key attraction of the business is the company's 50/50 joint venture with General Electric in the narrow-body commercial aircraft market, which supplies 100% of the engines for Boeing 737s and competes with United Technologies for a share of the Airbus A320 market. Safran's scale in this niche market is unrivalled, and the company's legacy product, the CFM56, is the most successful commercial engine ever produced. This business has great long-term potential given the seven to eight year engine production backlog and the high margin aftermarket business of more than 20 years after a plane is first delivered.

At the same time, the business is currently experiencing a product transition, as Safran begins delivery of new fuel efficient LEAP engines that will replace CFM56 engines for the next generation of Boeing and Airbus narrow-body planes. Although this transition is currently depressing profits, the cost profile of these new engines should materially improve by 2019–2020, which should significantly boost profitability. Safran currently trades at 19 times 2018 owner earnings.

Alibaba Group is the largest e-commerce marketplace in China and the world with $700 billion of gross merchandise volume this year. As a pure marketplace, the company allows third-party merchants to sell on its platform and generates revenue mostly through advertising. Merchants greatly value Alibaba's large and highly active user base (200 million active daily users and 500 million active monthly users), and many merchants derive the vast majority of their online sales from Alibaba's marketplace. Given the company's enviable competitive position, increased use as an advertising platform, and promising investments abroad, we expect Alibaba to grow e-commerce revenues at a rate faster than the e-commerce market overall.

When also considering the company's leadership position in emerging businesses with large potential such as internet payments (Alipay), internet finance (ANT Financial), cloud computing (Alibaba Cloud), digital media (Youku Tudou), and offline retail (multiple investments), we believe Alibaba is uniquely positioned in the world's largest online market. After assigning credible, although likely to be conservative valuations to these emerging business initiatives, the company's core e-commerce business is trading at 26 times fiscal year March 31, 2019 earnings.

LafargeHolcim is a global cement, aggregates and ready-mix concrete producer headquartered in Switzerland. The company is the largest producer of cement by volume globally and is among the top producers of both aggregates and concrete world-wide by volume. The need for access to limestone and rock quarries, high transportation costs and regulatory constraints on building new cement plants near city centers limit competition leading to above average returns. Returns for cement have been 15-25% pre-tax through the economic cycle. Well-balanced geographic exposure to rapidly urbanizing developing markets in Asia, Latin America and the Middle East, as well as, the recovering economies of Europe should lead to good growth over the next several years. LafargeHolcim trades at approximately 16 times conservatively stated 2018 owner earnings. ■

Conclusion

We believe a key reason for Selected International Fund's long-term outperformance since the Fund's strategy change in 2011 is our focus and willingness to look quite different from its benchmark index, the MSCI ACWI ex-U.S. Selected International Fund has approximately 40 holdings compared with the MSCI ACWI ex-U.S. benchmark, which has more than 1,800 holdings. Obviously, there are not 1,800 great companies in the world, and the Index includes many state-run financial companies, utilities and industrial businesses that often have other priorities than shareholder returns. Similarly, when approaching investing in emerging markets we are highly selective. Our emerging markets holdings are focused on four countries where we see superior investment opportunities compared with the benchmark approach of spreading emerging market investments across 24 countries. This selective strategy coupled with our long-term investment horizon is a key pillar of the Davis investment approach. We thank you for your continued trust and interest in Selected International Fund. ■

Objective and Risks. Selected International Fund's investment objective is capital growth. There can be no assurance that the Fund will achieve its objective. Some important risks of an investment in the Fund are:

common stock risk: an adverse event may have a negative impact on a company and could result in a decline in the price of its common stock; depository receipts risk: depository receipts may trade at a discount (or premium) to the underlying security and may be less liquid than the underlying securities listed on an exchange; emerging market risk: securities of issuers in emerging and developing markets may present risks not found in more mature markets. As of December 31, 2017, the Fund had approximately 61.5% of assets invested in emerging markets; fees and expenses risk: the Fund may not earn enough through income and capital appreciation to offset the operating expenses of the Fund; foreign country risk: foreign companies may be subject to greater risk as foreign economies may not be as strong or diversified; foreign currency risk: the change in value of a foreign currency against the U.S. dollar will result in a change in the U.S. dollar value of securities denominated in that foreign currency; headline risk: the Fund may invest in a company when the company becomes the center of controversy. The company's stock may never recover or may become worthless; large-capitalization companies risk: companies with $10 billion or more in market capitalization generally experience slower rates of growth in earnings per share than do mid- and small-capitalization companies; manager risk: poor security selection may cause the Fund to underperform relevant benchmarks; mid- and small-capitalization companies risk: companies with less than $10 billion in market capitalization typically have more limited product lines, markets and financial resources than larger companies, and may trade less frequently and in more limited volume; and stock market risk: stock markets have periods of rising prices and periods of falling prices, including sharp declines. See the prospectus for a complete description of the principal risks.

The Fund is subject to a 2% short-term redemption fee for shares held for fewer than 30 days.
