Selected International Fund

Semi-Annual Review 2019

Investment Results

The Selected International Fund's performance in the first half of 2019 was driven by our holdings in the consumer discretionary, industrials and financials sectors.

The Selected International Fund increased 17.8% in the first half of 2019, compared with an increase of 13.6% for the MSCI ACWI (All Country World Index) ex US, an outperformance of 4.2%. Generally speaking, the companies and sectors that declined the most at the end of 2018, when worries about the U.S. trade situation were the most acute, led the outperformance in the first half of 2019. However, most of these companies, such as our holdings of leading Chinese consumer companies, including Alibaba Group, JD.com and Hollysys Automation Technologies, are still down significantly from where they were just 12 months ago as U.S. trade relations remain a source of friction.

Crucially, while stock prices have been impacted by macro concerns, the company results continue to be very strong. In the latest quarter results, for example, Chinese e-commerce leader Alibaba's revenues grew 51%, and operating profits in the core e-commerce business were up 38%. JD.com is the #2 Chinese e-commerce player, and its revenues rose 21%, even as profit margins jumped significantly. Hollysys Automation, a leader in industrial automation in China, enjoyed a 28% increase in earnings per share (EPS). These companies focused on the Chinese domestic market have little exposure to export markets, and our long-term outlook for consumer demand in China remains very positive. Strong business results coupled with low valuations is in our view a very favorable investment environment.

Energy was the sector that was the largest detractor in the first half of 2019. While persistently low oil prices have impacted Encana and Seven Generations Energy, we continue to like their production and reserve profiles. Their North American shale positions continue to be low-cost and productive. ■

■ Representative Holdings

We invest around the world in select businesses to take advantage of long-term global trends.

While we believe certain emerging markets can be the home to world-class businesses, we also think selectivity is critical in reducing risks. As a result, we are in only four (China, Brazil, India, and South Africa) of the 26 emerging markets listed in the benchmark index. One such world-class business is SulAmerica SA, an over 100-year-old Brazilian health and auto insurer. Its primary focus is health insurance, where it has a 10% share, with a skew to higher-end plans. With a history of disciplined underwriting, the company has a long track record of success. Brazil is underpenetrated from a health insurance perspective, with only 23% of the population insured, and the rest relying on a public system that is widely considered inferior to private alternatives. SulAmerica has been gaining share in recent years, aided by the distress and in some cases outright failure of competitors, many of which are doctor-owned cooperatives, known as Unimed, that have been struggling in a tough economic environment.

Investing in Brazil comes with risks: the country's economy remains fragile, and new president Bolsonaro faces challenges in pushing through a critical pension reform package. That said, though, jobs and car sales are starting to grow again, and SulAmerica is well-positioned to take advantage of a return to normalcy in the economy. The company today trades for just under 13x 2019 price/levered owner earnings (P/LOE), which we believe is attractive, as is the large ownership stake that the founding family continues to maintain in the business.

JD.com is another company that is well-positioned as a leading e-commerce platform in China. The company differentiates itself from its major China e-commerce peers by operating a first-party business that sells from its own stocked inventory, in addition to a marketplace business connecting third-party merchants with customers. As a result, despite being smaller than Alibaba, JD.com is actually the largest retailer, either online or offline, in China, which has become the world's largest e-commerce market in the world. Similar to Amazon in the U.S., JD.com has built China's most advanced e-commerce fulfillment and logistics infrastructure, encompassing more than 550 warehouses across the country and enabling same-day and next-day delivery. JD.com's reputation for quality, authenticity and convenience has given its first-party business strong competitive positions in categories such as electronics and home appliances, while enabling the company to invest in expansion into newer categories such as fast-moving consumer goods.

We believe that JD.com will continue to be a key beneficiary of China's increasing adoption of online shopping and that the company will leverage the scale of its first-party business and logistics operations to continue to take share from fragmented offline competitors. Sustained growth will increase the company's bargaining power over suppliers, which should help to drive an increase in profitability over the long term. In addition, the company could see significant margin benefits from improvements in its high-margin advertising and marketplace businesses. Therefore, despite being marginally profitable today due to significant reinvestment through the income statement, we believe that over the long term, the company should be able to achieve a mid-single-digit normalized operating margin. ■

Conclusion

Market volatility over the last 12 months largely driven by macroeconomic concerns, such as U.S. trade relations, can be unnerving. As long-term value-focused investors, however, we take advantage of temporary dislocations by adding to our positions in these world-class businesses. While we continue to closely monitor macroeconomic trends and potential scenarios, we have used recent market volatility to add to names such as JD.com, Bank of Butterfield, and New Oriental Education and Technology, as well as build a new position in Danske Bank.

At Davis, we always want to ensure we follow the teachings of Warren Buffett's mentor, Ben Graham, who memorably stated in a 1987 Berkshire Hathaway shareholder letter: "Mr. Market is there to serve you, not to guide you. It is his pocketbook, not his wisdom, that you will find useful." We remain enthusiastic about owning a portfolio of world-class companies with durable competitive advantages around the globe, trading at attractive valuations. We thank you for your continued trust and interest in the Selected International Fund. ■

Objective and Risks. Selected International Fund's investment objective is capital growth. There can be no assurance that the Fund will achieve its objective. Some important risks of an investment in the Fund are: common stock risk: an adverse event may have a negative impact on a company and could result in a decline in the price of its common stock; depository receipts risk: depository receipts may trade at a discount (or premium) to the underlying security and may be less liquid than the underlying securities listed on an exchange; emerging market risk: securities of issuers in emerging and developing markets may present risks not found in more mature markets. As of 6/30/19, the Fund had approximately 66.1% of assets invested in emerging markets; fees and expenses risk: the Fund may not earn enough through income and capital appreciation to offset the operating expenses of the Fund; foreign country risk: foreign companies may be subject to greater risk as foreign economies may not be as strong or diversified; foreign currency risk: the change in value of a foreign currency against the U.S. dollar will result in a change in the U.S. dollar value of securities denominated in that foreign currency; headline risk: the Fund may invest in a company when the company becomes the center of controversy. The company's stock may never recover or may become worthless; large-capitalization companies risk: companies with $10 billion or more in market capitalization generally experience slower rates of growth in earnings per share than do mid- and small-capitalization companies; manager risk: poor security selection may cause the Fund to underperform relevant benchmarks; mid- and small-capitalization companies risk: companies with less than $10 billion in market capitalization typically have more limited product lines, markets and financial resources than larger companies, and may trade less frequently and in more limited volume; and stock market risk: stock markets have periods of rising prices and periods of falling prices, including sharp declines. See the prospectus for a complete description of the principal risks.

We gather our index data from a combination of reputable sources, including, but not limited to, Thomson Financial, Lipper and index websites.

The MSCI ACWI (All Country World Index) ex US is a free float-adjusted market capitalization weighted index that is designed to measure the equity market performance of developed and emerging markets, excluding the United States. The index includes reinvestment of dividends, net of foreign withholding taxes. Investments cannot be made directly in an index.

The Fund's performance benefited from IPO purchases in 2010 and in 2014. After purchase, the IPOs rapidly increased in value. Davis Advisors purchases shares intending to benefit from long-term growth of the underlying company; the rapid appreciation of the IPOs was an unusual occurrence. From the date that Davis Advisors first began managing the Fund (5/1/93) until 5/1/11, Selected International Fund was named Selected Special Shares and invested primarily in domestic equity securities. The Fund invests primarily in foreign equity securities and the past performance of the Fund is unlikely to be relevant to future performance.

After 10/31/19, this material must be accompanied by a supplement containing performance data for the most recent quarter end.
